What's the big deal with the RCI membership?

Firstly, in order to obtain an RCI Membership, you must own a timeshare or vacation ownership package that is affiliated with RCI either through your purchase directly from the developer or from a secondary resale company. For most of timeshare owners, RCI is an exchange network to trade in their timeshare for another located around the world. However, for many savvy timeshare travelers, an RCI membership also means great savings... to pick up a week in a 1 or 2 bedroom villa in Spain, Greece, Florida or Canada for as little as 99$ up to 399$ for a full week! And, why such great bargains? This is why.

Think about this question:

What is the most expensive hotel room in the world?

(I get a kick out of it because of all the answers I get, from NY City to Dubai, etc.)

In fact, the most expensive hotel room is an 'empty one'. Hotel rooms start off empty and as the room gets rented out and demand becomes more than supply, the prices increase. For resorts, it's the opposite. The rooms start full and as more members deposit their time into RCI, the units become more available closer to the travelling dates and thus increasing the supply!

As occupancy dates get closer and closer, timeshare condos or villas that have not been traded are made available short notice to owners from around the world at ridiculously low rates to avoid having empty units... or resorts.

Every week, RCI free up to 8,000 weeks that have not been traded and all of those are offered to timeshare owners as last minute destinations. So if you're flexible and able to plan a vacation 45 days or less, you may want to take a look at the RCI Bonus Weeks search program. Then all you do is book, pay and discover great places you might not even have thought about for a vacation!

You can purchase as many bonus weeks as you'd like as well as to buy them for friends and families. The cost of joining RCI is around 79$ to 99$ per year! This is one of the great benefits of owning a timeshare!

AND FOR MANY RCI MEMBERS,
THAT'S WHAT THE BIG DEAL IS ALL ABOUT!
