New Report on Timeshare Rentals Predicts Constant Growth

According to Timeshare Resale News, a new market report has found travelers are considering vacation rental for everything from family holidays to business trips this year. The findings are consistent with recent surveys showing that rather than cutting back on travel during the recession, many Americans facing a leaner budget are looking for great deals and discounts.

In the view of many travel commentators, vacation rentals such as timeshare rentals offer just the kind of savings value-minded travelers are hoping to find. In fact, "With or without deals or special offers, there is an underlying value to vacation rentals," says one industry insiders Mike Butler. "Vacation rental homes enable you to rent a whole home for less than the cost of a hotel room and then even stretch your travel budget further by taking advantage of the full kitchens and extra amenities," he adds.

Many have also predicted a sustained growth for the vacation rental and ownership industry, beyond the current economic downturn. Among the contributing factors is the fact that baby boomers are nearing retirement age, and they tend to value flexible, high-quality but low-cost vacation options which allow them to invite family members and spend quality time together in a home-like environment.
